

IT'S A BULL (ST) MARKET

By Daryl Guppy

Cold calls from boiler rooms selling sure fire stock opportunities and unsolicited emails headed THE SINGAPORE METHOD. These are all scams and these days easily verified with a google search.

This offer comes from Jake Shen (AKA Jake Mason, Jake Pertu etc). But it is also known as the British Method, the Canadian method, the Swedish method, the Saffra method, the Aussie method and the Malaysian method. This summary comes from <http://thebestbinaryoptionsbrokers.net/dangerous-scam-the-aussie-method-of-jake-pertu> but it also applies to the Singapore method.

His photo comes from a public database, so we have every reason to believe that it is a fake profile. Pertu offers a personal guarantee, but he provides a fake profile and no contact information. His guarantee is obviously not real. And all the account statements are fake.

Because Pertu is just a binary option affiliate, he will make money each time he refers a new trader to his broker, this is why he is doing it. You will then lose your deposit and you will never be able to contact him for his guarantee, this is how it works. If you have doubts, read the Disclaimer on his page, there are no guarantees whatsoever.

More detail of this scam is on <http://scam.reviews/tag/jake-pertu/> They also cover several other scams.

All this begs the question. Why are regulators not taking down or pursuing these scam merchants? Readers of this newsletter are too smart to get caught up in these scams, but there are many less-sophisticated investors who are easy prey and require regulatory protection.
